

Famous “Fatberg” of London was cleared by KROLL-Truck

It took 10 nights to blast the blockage out of the sewer

The Kroll recycler delivered end of June to company “CountyClean Environmental Services”, East Sussex, killed the enormous “Fatberg”! The international press “sky news” wrote:

“Repairs have started after Britain's biggest ever "fatberg" - the size of a double-decker bus - was removed from a London sewer.

The 15-tonne mass of festering food fat mixed with wet wipes and sanitary products threatened to send raw sewage spurting onto the leafy streets of Kingston upon Thames.

“We've never seen a single, congealed lump of lard this big clogging our sewers before,” said Thames Water waste contracts supervisor Gordon Hailwood.

“The sewer was almost completely clogged with over 15 tonnes of fat. If we hadn't discovered it in time, raw sewage could have started spurting out of manholes across the whole of Kingston.

“It was so big it damaged the sewer and repairs will take up to six weeks.”

The foul blockage was discovered when residents of nearby flats complained they could not flush their toilets.

Links: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2s-ztjbj9Bs>
<http://news.sky.com/story/1124836/bus-sized-fatberg-threatened-london-streets>